WILDCATS WORSTED

Goodbred Featured in a Six to Two
Score in Favor of the Gainesville Boys

It was very little effort for Gainesville to put the hooks to Ocala in yesterday's game. The local fans became so accustomed to top-notch ball playing that they could hardly believe their eyes yesterday when the team seemed out-classed by the visitors. Gainesville piled up three runs in the third inning and Ocala was never able to overcome their lead. At that the visitors were not satisfied and added another three runs in the ninth.

The Gainesville team played excellent ball, making only two errors and displayed an ability to hit when their men were on bases. They secured only nine hits but on two occasions bunched three of those in one inning. Ocala got eight safeties but only two times did she get more than one in an inning and then two hits was the best she could do.

C. O. Goodbred pitched a good game for the visitors. He fanned eight men and only allowed eight hits. His control was good and his ability to work out of nasty holes was remarkable. He seemed to retire the Ocala swatters without a hit if a hit was to mean a run.

M. Overstreet performed for Ocala and pitched a very good game but he had poor support. The team fielded poorly and even the fielding of Overstreet himself was not up to the mark. He made several fumbles in the box that were costly. In spite of the fact that the game was slow and full of bad plays there were a few outstanding features that are worth remembering. Villirno caught a thrown ball on his first sack that was a hard one to get. Chancey made a pretty catch of a hard foul, popped up by Liddell.

Collins ran back of second and robbed Rymer of a pretty Texas leaguer in the sixth. Harry Wood caught a line drive between right and center that was headed for the Star Publishing Company's sign for at least two bases. Rymer pulled one down in left field that the Gainesville boys were certain was over the fence. They were yelling "Go get that one next Tuesday," but Rymer decided to grab it out of the atmosphere rather than run it down. Leon made a nice catch of Chancey's fly in the eighth.

The hitting was more sensational than the fielding. Villirno fattened his average by getting three out of four. Jones did pretty well with three out of five. Rymer also rapped on three out of four while Harry Wood and Leon each drove out two out of four.

Ocala scored in the first inning. Taylor fanned. Van went out third to first. Leon singled to left and stole second. Rymer singled, scoring Leon. Gainesville made three in the third. Villirno led off with a single to center. Jones hit to the pitcher who was overanxious to get two and threw wild. Lindsey went out second to first. Chancey hit to Taylor, who had a chance to get two but erred and got none while Villirno scored. Jones was caught napping on third and Eddie Overstreet added his scalp to the long string that dangles at his belt. Pfeiffer singled to left and scored Chancey, going to second and third on the play at the plate. White singled to left, scoring Pfeiffer.

Ocala scored again in the sixth. Leon led off with a single. Rymer flew out to second. Eddie Overstreet hit to short who fumbled a chance for a double and both runners were safe. Wood singled to left, scoring Leon. In the ninth Gainesville messed the game all up. Collins led off and drew

GERMAN MARKETS DANGEROUS GROUND

Washington, July 17.—American trade agents in Germany have hoisted a danger signal for American buyers of German goods. American commercial experts in Berlin have cabled to Washington warnings that German business and industry is being conducted upon a purely speculative basis. American buyers are reminded that German merchants will decline to guarantee prices for future deliveries.

Americans returning from the Leipzig fair have reported that German manufacturers generally refused to offer firm prices, except for goods in limited quantities and goods already manufactured.

An element of instability in German manufacturing is the fact that the Germans make no wage agreements for a longer period than one month. Exact knowledge of future German trade values is impossible because of the prospect of wage advances from time to time, of increases in utility rates, which have failed thus far to cut down heavy deficits, and a steady advance in prices of raw materials. Another factor of insecurity, according to these expert observations, is the system of levying export supplements. These are designed to bring the price of German exports closer to the price prevailing in the country importing German goods.

Shifting prices in Germany, therefore, and the almost certain prospect that production costs will rise steadily up toward the world level, eventually can be counted upon by Americans in their dealings with German traders. Further uncertainty grows out of the fluctuations, and depreciation of the German mark.

American importers in some instances have reaped large fortunes by taking advantage of the German situation in earlier periods and buying cheaply and selling at high profits. German readjustment, however, has brought such speculation to the point of serious risk by those who attempt it, in the opinion of American observers. It will be especially dangerous in a financial sense for those who seek to buy in large quantities.

The "A" Club was entertained last night by Mrs. Edmund Martin, at her comfortable suburban home. Auction was the game of the evening and after five rounds the scores were collected and the tea cloths spread on the card tables and delicious salad and cooling ice tea were served by the hostesses and a half-hour of chatter followed, before the guests bade their hostess good-night. Before departure, Mrs. Martin presented the "fortunate ones" with attractive remembrances of the game, Mrs. W. M. Palmer and Mrs. Edmund Martin of the club members and Miss Adele Bittinger and Miss Carita Camp among the visitors. Those enjoying the evening with Mrs. Martin were Mrs. Sam Leigh, Mrs. Harry Borland, Mrs. Albert Harriss, Mrs. Harry Walters, Mrs. Paul Simmons, Mrs. R. S. Hall, Mrs. W. M. Palmer, Mrs. Allison Wartmann, Misses Agnes Burford, Nettie Camp, Adele Bittinger, Meme and Elizabeth Davis, Nettie, Stella and Carita Camp.

FIGHTING THE FLAMES

New York Fire Department Today
Engaged in Fiercest Battle It
Has Seen for Years

New York, July 18.—A series of explosions in a six-story warehouse at No. 10 Jane street today shattered windows for blocks around. Women and children fleeing from the nearby tenements were hurled to the pavement by the force of the blasts. Five fire alarms were turned in and ambulances took many to the hospitals. Falling debris killed a fire lieutenant and injured three other firemen. The police and firemen carried away many frightened women and children out of the neighboring Greenwich Village tenements.

INTERMITTENT EXPLOSIONS

More than an hour after the first explosion intermittent explosions continued within the warehouse. There is the greatest array of fire fighting apparatus on hand since the Equitable building fire. It is believed there were chemicals or powder stored in the warehouse. Many of the seriously injured were firemen and police.

FIRE ENGINE CRASHED

Two hours after the fire broke out the smoke was so thick that a call was sent to a Brooklyn fire department to bring 45,000 candlepower searchlights to enable the firemen to see the enveloped warehouse. An engine summoned from Brooklyn struck the curb at a corner and hurled two firemen beneath the wheels. One was instantly killed and the other seriously hurt.

LONG CASUALTY LIST

At noon the casualty list stood two dead, nearly thirty injured and three missing. Firemen of many years experience declared it the worst blaze in their experience.

Among hundreds driven to the streets by the stifling smoke which settled over the district like a pall were scores of artists and poets from Greenwich Village. Standing behind the fire lines were bobbed haired women puffing cigarettes as the firemen worked.

The heat was so intense the firemen had to prop hose nozzles at points in the street and go to the roofs of other buildings to work other hose lines.
